

AN ANALYSIS OF THE ARGUMENTS AND COUNTER ARGUMENTS ON THE LANGUAGE OF DELIVERY OF KHUTBATUL-JUMU'AH (FRIDAY SERMON) IN THE MUSLIM WORLD

(Analisis Hujahan dan Hujahan Balas Terhadap Bahasa Penyampaian Khutbatul-Jumu'ah (khutbah Jumaat) dalam Masyarakat Islam)

¹OWOYEMI SAMUWILU ALADE

¹ Department of Religious Studies, Olabisi Onabanjo University, Ago-Iwoye Ogun
State, Nigeria

ABSTRACT

Friday sermon is seen as a veritable medium employed by Friday Imam to address various issues affecting Muslims and their communities on weekly basis. Observance of Friday prayer attracts large number of Muslim worshippers who listen to sermon that precedes the prayer. However, there have been arguments and counter arguments on the view of some Muslim jurists that Arabic language should be the appropriate language of the delivery of the Friday sermon. Adopting analytical method, the paper aims at examining the divergent opinions of the Muslims' jurists on the language of Friday sermon. The finding of this study reveals that there are arguments and counter arguments on the language of delivery of Friday sermon due to the fact that there is no Quran verse or authentic hadith that specifically makes delivery of Friday sermon in Arabic compulsory. The finding also shows that Khutbatul-Jumu'ah (Friday sermon) cannot be equated with Salat (ritual prayer) and for the Friday sermon to have positive impact on the life of the congregation, Friday Imam is expected to deliver his sermon in the language understood by the majority of the congregation.

Keywords: Friday sermon; Friday prayer; argument; Arabic language; Muslim world

ABSTRAK

Khutbah Jumaat adalah medium yang digunakan oleh Imam untuk menyampaikan pelbagai isu yang memberi kesan kepada masyarakat Islam pada setiap minggu. Daripada pemerhatian, didapati solat Jumaat menarik minat banyak umat Islam untuk mendengar Khutbah Jumaat terlebih dahulu sebelum menunaikan solat. Walaubagaimanapun, terdapat hujahan dan hujahan balas berdasarkan pandangan beberapa ulama'/ulamak Islam yang menyatakan bahawa bahasa Arab merupakan bahasa yang sesuai untuk menyampaikan khutbah Jumaat. Dengan mengadaptasi kaedah analitikal, makalah ini bertujuan untuk mengkaji perbezaan pendapat ulama'/ulamak Islam berkaitan dengan bahasa penyampaian khutbah Jumaat. Hasil kajian ini mendapati bahawa terdapat hujahan dan hujahan balas terhadap penggunaan bahasa penyampaian khutbah Jumaat disebabkan oleh fakta yang tidak mengandungi ayat al-Quran atau hadis sahih yang khusus yang menyebabkan penyampaian Khutbah Jumaat wajib disampaikan dalam bahasa Arab. Dapatan ini juga menunjukkan Khutbatul-Jumu'ah (khutbah Jumaat) tidak boleh disamakan dengan solat lima waktu/solat biasa dan khutbah Jumaat juga memberi kesan positif terhadap kehidupan jemaah, penyampaian khutbah Jumaat yang disampaikan oleh Imam hendaklah menggunakan bahasa yang mudah difahami oleh majority jemaah.

Kata kunci: Khutbah Jumaat; Solat Jumaat; perdebatan; Bahasa Arab; masyarakat Islam

INTRODUCTION

Language is said to be a vehicle of communication among humankind. It consists of speech making body gestures and remarks. There are several thousands of languages across the world. Some are regarded as local, national and international languages. Among the international languages are English, French and Arabic which are being spoken at the international meetings and conferences of United Nations (UN), African Union (AU) and Oil Producing Exporting Countries (OPEC). However, Arabic language is the original source and a vehicle that conveys Islam as a world religion and a comprehensive way of life. It has often been said that "language is a city, to the building of which every human being brought a stone" (Metacalfe and Astle C n.d).

Muslims across the globe observe Jumu'ah (Friday prayer) on weekly basis. The prayer attracts Muslims of diverse backgrounds including, colour, tribe and language. Importantly, one of the unique features of Friday service is its Khutbah (sermon) which precedes the Friday prayer. The observance of Friday service is so important in Islam to the extent that a chapter of the Quran is dedicated to it. It is Suratul-Jumu'ah (Chapter of Gathering/Assembly), which is the chapter 62 of the Glorious Quran. Sermon is part of Friday prayer and its reward will be incomplete if it is omitted. In fact, some Muslim jurists opine that non-delivering of Friday sermon renders Friday prayer invalid, null and void (Nyazee 2006).

In the modern Muslim world, there have been arguments and counter arguments on delivering of Friday sermon in Arabic Language. Basing their arguments on Islamic scripture, some jurists insist that Arabic Language should be the language of delivery of Friday sermon, while other jurists, also resting their arguments on Islamic scripture (Quran and hadith) and fatawa (Islamic judgments) of some scholars, submit that Arabic language is not compulsory for the presentation of Friday sermon on pulpit and that language understood by the Imam and congregation should be used as language of the delivery of Friday sermon. It is against this backdrop that this paper examines the arguments and counter arguments of Muslim jurists on the language of Friday sermon. The purpose of this paper is to analysis the arguments before taking its final position for the consideration of the Muslim world.

Friday prayer is one of the most distinguished acts of worship in Islam. It is the most stressed obligatory act and unique assembly of the Muslims. The majority of the Muslim jurists uphold the universal obligation of Friday prayer due to the fact that it is a substitute for another obligatory prayer which is Salatuz-Zuhr (noon prayer) (Nyazee 2006; Fawzani 2009). Friday prayer is said to be the only prayer prescribed by Allah to be performed in congregation. It cannot be performed individually like other ritual prayers. The obligation of Friday prayer is attested to by the Quran and hadith (prophetic sayings). The injunction commanding Muslims to observe Friday prayer is in the Quran, which means:

“O you who believe! When the call is proclaimed for prayer Friday, then hasten to the remembrance of Allah and leave off all trade. That is better for you if only you know. And when the prayer has been completed, then you may disperse through the land and seek Allah’s bounty, but remember Allah frequently so that you may be successful” (al-Jumu’ah 62: 9-10).

The command, in the quoted Quranic passage, necessitates an obligation to observe Friday prayer. There are several prophetic statements that attest to the obligatory observance of Friday prayer. Deliberate abandonment or non observance of Friday prayer without valid excuse(s) by matured Muslims is condemnable and punishable. The Prophet is quoted by Khan (1985) as saying:

“Let my people be aware of neglecting the Friday prayer else, Allah will set a seal upon their hearts and they will be counted among the neglected ones”.

In another hadith narrated by Abu Sai'd al-Khudriy, the Prophet is reported by Ismail (1997) as saying:

“Indeed Allah has enjoined upon you (Muslims) Friday prayer in this place, hour, month, year till the day of Resurrection. Whoever abandons it without any valid excuse, with just Imam or a free born Imam, Allah will not bless him in his affairs, he will have no reward for his prayer, his hajj or any of his righteous deed or his charity will not be accepted”.

Abu al-Ja'd ad-Damari reported that the Prophet is reported by Dabbas and Zaraboso (1985) as saying:

“Whoever misses three Friday prayers in a row out of negligence will have a seal put over his heart by Allah”.

Ibn Masu'd reports that the Prophet noticed some people staying away from the Friday prayer and said as quoted by Dabbas and Zaraboso (1985):

“I had the notion to order someone to lead the people in prayer and then go and burn the houses of those who stayed away from the Friday prayer”.

Majority of the Muslim jurists unanimously agreed that Friday sermon is obligatory and that it is a condition for the validity of Friday prayer (Salatul-Jumu'ah). The evidence of its obligatory, according to the jurists, is based on the command of Allah in the Quran, (Suratul al-Jumu'ah) which means:

“O you who believe! When the call is proclaimed for Friday prayer, hasten unto the remembrance of Allah”.

The verse which contains an order to hasten unto remembrance of Allah, implies that Friday prayer is obligatory and the fact that scholars interpret “Dhikr” as remembrance of Allah to include Friday sermon also implies that Friday sermon is equally obligatory (Dabbas & Zaraboso 1985; Ismail 1997).

Besides the Quranic verse which legalizes Friday sermon, there are also some hadith (prophetic sayings) which confirm that Friday sermon is obligatory. The proponents of this opinion, among the jurists base their argument on the hadith of the Prophet which Ibrahim Musa and Uthman Abi Sheybah al-Mughin reported from Abi al-Ahwas that Samak heard Jabir bin Samarat saying in Abdul Wali (2010) and Dabbas and Zaraboso (1985) that:

“The Messenger of Allah used to have two sermons in the Friday prayer”.

The Prophet is also quoted by Dabbas and Zaraboso (1985) saying:

“Pray as you see me pray”.

However, some jurists maintain that Friday sermon is not obligatory. One of them is Ash-Shawkani who understood the Quranic verse on Friday prayer as simply as a command to be present at the Friday prayer as only obligatory and not that Friday sermon is obligatory. Al Shawkani as quoted by Dabbas and Zaraboso (1985) further says:

“Regarding their argument relating to the commandment to hasten unto the remembrance of Allah, it only refers to the prayer which is the real cause for making haste. There is, however, an agreement that Friday prayer is obligatory while there is a dispute over whether or not the Khutbah is obligatory. The correct view is that the Khutbah is only a highly recommended act”.

Fawzani (2009) maintains that Friday sermon is considered a condition for the validity of Friday prayer. The reason is that the Prophet used to deliver two sermons before performing the Friday prayer. Ibn Umar said: The Prophet used to deliver two sermons while standing and sit in between them.

On divergent opinions on whether Friday sermon is obligatory or recommended for the validity of Friday prayer, Nyazee (2006) states that whoever maintains that Friday sermon represents two rakaat of the Zuhr (noon) prayer will conclude that Friday sermon is a condition for the validity of Friday prayer. On the other hand, whoever maintains that Friday sermon is an ordinary sermon or usual exhortation will conclude that Friday sermon is not obligatory but a recommended act.

The Muslim jurists have extensively discussed the main ingredients and components of Friday sermon. In other words, the basic features or contents of the sermon have been enumerated in Islamic literature books and Fiqh (Islamic jurisprudence). The Shafi'i and the Hanbali Schools of thought, for instance, maintain that Friday sermon should consist of praising Allah, salutations or prayers upon the Prophet Muhammad, admonition or preaching on piety, Quranic recitations (in each of the two Khutbahs) and in the last segment of the second Khutbah (sermon) supplications should be offered for the believers or the congregation. The Maliki and the majority of the Hanafi jurists opine that the contents of Friday sermon should include long remembrance of Allah, warning (exhortation) and giving glad tidings. To them, the least ingredient or component of Friday sermon is the pronouncement of Kalimatush-Shahadah (words of testimony) and the recitation of three verses from the Quran (Ismail 1997).

There are Prophetic traditions which the Muslim jurists use to support their views on the components of Friday sermon. One of such prophetic traditions is related by Ahmad, Abu Dawud and at-Tirmidhi as quoted by Dabbas and Zaraboso (1985), which goes thus:

“The Friday sermon that does not contain the testimony (There is no god except Allah and Muhammad is His Messenger) is like the defective hand”.

In another tradition quoted by Dabbas and Zaroboso (1985), Jabir Samurah said:

“The Messenger of Allah would deliver sermon standing, would sit in between the two Khutbah, would recite some verses and would remind the people about Allah”.

There are divergent opinions on what should be the minimum length or content of Friday sermon. One of the Muslim jurists, Ibn al-Qasim opines that the least statement that can be called a sermon in the usage of the Arabs is to utter a word of praises i.e. Alhamdulillah at the beginning. Al-Shafi‘i, on the other hand, opines that what is considered to be the minimum components of Friday sermon is that the Khutbah should be in two parts during which the Imam or the Khateeb should be standing and that the sermon should be separated with a short sitting. Each of the Khutbah should begin with praises of Allah, blessings on Prophet Muhammad and admonition on piety. The Imam or the Khateeb should also recite a passage from the Quran in the first part of the sermon and pray for believers in the second part. According to Nyazee (2006), the reason for the divergent opinions among the jurists on what should be the components of Friday sermon is because sermon is viewed from literal and technical perspectives. Those (jurists) who view Khutbah in a literal sense will ignore the Prophetic arrangement of the Khutbah while those who view Khutbah in a technical sense will uphold its Prophetic organization (e.g. glorification, praises of Allah) and make it compulsory (Nyazee 2006).

Fawzani (2009) opines that Friday sermon must contain words of praise of Allah, declaring the two testimonies of faith, conferring blessing upon the Prophet, giving advice on the fear Allah as well as good instruction and the recitation of the Quran. While highlighting the basic features and components of Friday sermon, Fawzani (2009) quotes Ibn Qayyim as saying:

“Contemplating the sermons of the Prophet and those of his companions, one finds such lessons sufficient to make clear the guidance and oneness of Allah. These sermons also explain the attributes of the Lord, Exalted be He, and the comprehensive principles of faith, call to Allah, show Allah’s favour that draws His servant near to Him and mention His days. Those who listen to such sermons would leave the mosque while they love Allah and Allah loves them”.

Corroborating the submission of Ibn Qayyim on the components of the Prophet's Friday Khutbah and those of his companions, Dabbas and Zaraboso (1985) comment thus:

“If we study the Khutbah of the Prophet and his companions, we find them imbued with perspicuous guidance, tauhid, attributes of Allah, explaining the basic articles of faith, inviting people to Allah and drawing their attention to His providential care that makes Him so beloved to His slaves....”

However, there is contention over the purpose of Friday sermon. The fact that Friday Khutbah contains praising of Allah, saying prayers upon His Messenger or reciting a portion of the Quran does not mean that the Friday sermon has fulfilled its purpose. This is because such a proclamation is a tradition or usual practice among the speakers or orators. According to Dabbas and Zaraboso (1985), the main purpose of Friday sermon and which is considered as its main component is to exhort people to do good and warn them against the consequences of the evil. Therefore, confining the contents of Friday sermon to praising Allah, and saying prayers (salutations) on Prophet would not make the sermon acceptable. Dabbas and Zaraboso (1985) further explain:

“It is the admonitory aspect of the Friday sermon which the ahadith emphasize, and if a Khateeb (Imam) makes an admonition, he fulfills the purpose of Shari'ah (Islamic law) if he precedes his Khutbah with praises of Allah and prayers upon the Prophet and during his admonition, he uses Quranic verses then he does it in a complete and satisfactory manner”.

In his book, The Language of the Friday Khutbah, Usmani (2000) argues that Friday Khutbah must be delivered in Arabic and that it is not permissible to deliver it in any other language. He advances reasons for his argument on the following bases:

1. That Friday sermon is part of the Friday prayer and stands for two rakahs.
2. That Friday sermon is mentioned as Dhikr (remembrance) in al-Jumu'ah 62:9.
3. That the Holy Quran in al-'Araf 7: 204 refers to Friday sermon as the recitation of the Holy Quran.
4. That Friday sermon is a form of worship and not basically a method of preaching and education.
5. That the hadith of the Prophet forbids the audience to speak during Friday sermon
6. That most of the rules applicable to Salat (ritual prayer) are also applicable to Friday Khutbah
7. That the basic purpose of Friday Khutbah is Dhikr (remembrance) and not Tadhkir (admonition) (Usmani 2000)

While advancing reasons for his argument on delivering Friday sermon in Arabic language, Usmani (2000) further argues:

All these points (enumerated above) go a long way to prove that unlike normal lectures or sermons, certain rules peculiar to Salah (prayer) have been prescribed for the Khutbah of Jumu'ah. It is in this context that it has been held necessary that it should be delivered in Arabic only. Just as Salah cannot be performed in any language other than Arabic, the Khutbah of Jumu'ah too cannot be delivered in any other language. That is why the Holy Prophet never tried to direct his companions to deliver the Khutbah in the local language where the audience could not understand Arabic.

Furthermore, Usmani (2000) presents the opinions and rulings of the medieval jurists of the sunni schools of thought of Maliki, Shafi'i, Hanbali and Hanafi on the language of delivery of Friday Khutbah. The Maliki jurists are of the view that Friday Khutbah must be delivered in Arabic otherwise, the Friday prayer will be invalid and not binding on the congregation to observe it (Usmani 2000). One of the Maliki jurists, al-Dasuqi presents the view of the Maliki School of thought on the issue in Usmani (2000) as follows:

“And it is a condition for the validity of Jumu'ah (Friday prayer) that the Khutbah is delivered in Arabic, even though the people are non-Arabs and do not know the Arabic language. Therefore, if there is nobody who can deliver Khutbah in Arabic properly, the prayer of Jumu'ah is not obligatory on them (in which case they will offer the Zuhr prayer)”

The Shafi'i School of thought holds similar view to that of the Maliki but with modification. The Shafi'i jurists opine that Friday Khutbah should be delivered in Arabic but if it is not possible for the Khateeb to learn Arabic when the time of the Friday prayer is due, it is permissible for the Khateeb or Imam to deliver Khutbah in his own language. According to Usmani (2000), Al-Ramli, a famous Shafi'i jurist presents the view of the Shafi'i school on the language of Friday Khutbah in Usmani (2000) thus:

“And it is a condition (for the validity of Khutbah) that is delivered in Arabic. This is to follow the way of the Sahabah (companions) and their descendants. And to learn Arabic (for the purpose of delivering Khutbah) is Fard al-Kifayah, therefore it is sufficient that at least one man learns it.... But if no one learns it, all of them will be sinful and their Jumu'ah will not be acceptable. Instead, they will have to perform Zuhr prayer. However, if it is not at all possible (due to short time) that the Arabic is learnt, then it is permissible that the Imam delivers Khutbah in his own language, even though the people (audience) do not understand it.”

The legal ruling of the Hanbali school of thought is not different from that of Shafi'i jurists. The Hanbali's jurists too opine that Friday Khutbah must be delivered in Arabic but if nobody is found to deliver it in Arabic, it may be delivered in some other languages. As long as one person can speak Arabic among the congregation, it is necessary to deliver the Khutbah in Arabic even if the audience does not understand the Arabic (Usmani 2000). Al-Buhooti; one of the Hanbali jurists was quoted to have written in Usmani (2000) as follows:

“And the Khutbah is not valid if it is delivered in any language other than Arabic when somebody is able to deliver it in Arabic. It is like the recitation of the Holy Quran (in prayer) which cannot be done in a non-Arab language. However, the Khutbah in any other language is valid only if nobody can deliver it in Arabic. Nevertheless, the recitation of the Holy Quran (as a part of the Khutbah) is not valid except in Arabic. If somebody cannot recite in Arabic, it is obligatory on him to recite a Dhikr instead of a verse of the Holy Quran, like in Salah (the person who cannot recite the Quranic verses is required to make Dhikr”.

The Hanafi School of thought, according to Usmani (2000), agrees with the other three Sunni schools of Islamic jurisprudence that Friday Khutbah should be delivered in Arabic but with a slight difference of opinion. In view of Abu Yusuf and Muhammad, the followers of Imam Abu Hanifah, non-Arabic Khutbah is not acceptable except if there is no one from the Muslim Community that can deliver an Arabic Khutbah; only in that case non-Arabic Khutbah may fulfill the requirement based on the doctrine Ad-Daruriyyah (necessity). However, Imam Abu Hanifah is quoted by Usmani (2000) as saying:

“Although it is makrooh (impermissible) to deliver Khutbah in a non-Arab language yet if someone violates this principle and delivers it in any other language, then the requirement of Khutbah will be held as fulfilled and the Jumu'ah prayer offered after it will be valid”.

Meanwhile, in an attempt to harmonize the opinions of the four schools of thought on the language of the Friday Khutbah, Usmani (2000) concludes that all the Sunni schools of thought unanimously agreed that Friday Khutbah must be delivered in Arabic. However, a careful examination of the views of the Shafi'i, Hanbali and the Hanafi schools give an exception to the rule by permitting that Friday Khutbah can be delivered in other language besides Arabic provided the Imam or the Khateeb is unable to deliver the Khutbah in Arabic and that non-Arabic Khutbah renders Friday prayer valid.

On delivering Friday sermon in both Arabic and local languages, Usmani (2000) considers the practice acceptable. This is a situation whereby a lecture is given in a local language on Friday before the second adhan (call to prayer), then followed by Arabic Khutbah, after which the Friday prayer is observed. According to Usmani, such practice is prevalent in some non-Arab countries such as India, Pakistan and China. The practice is said to be in consonant with the practice of Umar bin al-Khattab (the second caliph), who was reported to have permitted Tamim al-Dari to give a lecture sermon in the masjid (mosque) before he (Umar) came out to deliver the Khutbah of Friday. On this issue, Usmani (2000) further observes:

“I have seen that almost in every mosque in India, China, South Africa and in large number of the mosques in UK, USA and Canada, both the Khutbah and a preceding lecture are easily combined within the time officially allowed for the Jumu'ah prayer and it has created no difficulty”.

Afzal (2012) summarizes arguments of the proponents of Arabic language as the language of the delivery of Friday Khutbah as follows:

1. That Khutbah replaces two Raka'at of Salatuz-Zuhr. The prayers are valid only in Arabic. Hence, Khutbah should also be delivered in Arabic only.
2. That Khutbah is Dhikr, (remembrance of Allah) and an integral part of the Jumu'ah prayer. It can be only in Arabic as no part of the prayer is in any language other than Arabic is permissible.
3. That Khutbah in Arabic is a Sunnah Muakkadah (emphatic way of life of Prophet Muhammad). Disregarding a Sunnah Muakkadah is considered a sin.
4. That Khutbah in Arabic was the consensus of the Ummah for the last 1,400 years. The Khulafa (the four rightly guided caliphs), the companions, and the generations following them did not use any other language in Khutbah when they reached far off lands and Arabic was not spoken there. They might have felt the need for reaching out to non-Arabic speakers, but kept Khutbah in Arabic.
5. That Many Companions knew or later understood Roman, Persian, Armenian, Coptic, and other languages. But the Khutbah was always given in Arabic. They did not ask a native dialect speaker to translate their Khutbah for others.

However, some modern scholars and jurists opine that Friday sermon can be delivered in any other language besides Arabic. Usmani's argument that Friday sermon is part of the Friday prayer and that it stands for the two rak'ah of salatuz-Zuhr has been refuted. According to Kilani (2008), Ibn Baz is of the view that those who made Khutbah compulsory in Arabic only intended to keep Arabic language strong in the hearts of the Muslims. It is, therefore, permissible, according to Ibn Baz to deliver Friday sermon in whatever language the Khateeb (the Imam) and the congregation understand. Kilani (2008) citing Ibn Baz's fatawa Islamiyyah (1988) states that:

“The Khutbah is meant to guide and exhort the people and this would not be possible if it was stated in a language they did not understand. Therefore, it is more important to achieve the goals of the Khutbah rather than just the outward form handed down from the time of the Prophet. If some of the listeners know Arabic, then it would be best to give part of the Khutbah in Arabic and then translate it into the other language during the Khutbah..... Therefore, translation, especially today, is a necessity and Da'wah or calling others to the straight path cannot be made without it”.

Ibn Uthaymeen, one of the modern Muslim jurists, is said to have corroborated Ibn Baz's view on the permissibility to deliver Friday Khutbah in other language apart from Arabic. Ibn Uthaymeen, in Fatawa Nurual al-Darb is quoted by Munajjid (2008) as saying:

“The correct view with regard to this matter is that it is permissible for the khateeb to deliver the khutbah in a language that the people present understand, if the people present are not Arabs and do not know Arabic. He may deliver the khutbah in their language, because that is the means of explaining to them, and the purpose of the khutbah is to explain the sacred limits of Allah to His slaves, and exhort them, and guide them. But the verses of Quran should be recited in Arabic, then explained in the language of the people”.

The fataawa (Islamic rulings) of some modern jurists including Ibn Baz and Ibn Uthaymeen on permissibility of delivering Friday Khutbah in a local language besides Arabic has been supported by a Quranic verse in Suratul Ibrahim 14: 4 which means:

“We have not sent any messenger except that he preached in the language of his people in order to clarify to them...”

Besides the Quranic evidence, majority of the modern scholars opine that Friday Khutbah cannot be equated with Salat (ritual prayer). Scholars differ in their opinion that Friday Khutbah takes the place (or substitutes) the first two rak'ah of Salatuz-Zuhr (noon prayer). The fact that Maliki and Hanafi schools of thought hold the view that Friday Khutbah can be delivered without sitting in between it implies that Friday Khutbah does not stand for the first two rak'ah of Salatuz-Zuhr (noon prayer). In his book, al-Jawaahir al-Minbariyyah, Taha (2006) categorically states that:

“It is a wrong notion to say that the two sermons (of the Friday prayer) are substitute or replacement of the two rakah of the Zuhr prayer because Jumu'ah (Friday prayer) is not a substitute for Zuhr (noon prayer) but Zuhr is a substitute for Friday prayer if one could not observe Jumu'ah (Friday prayer), he would observe four rakahs of Zuhr”.

Furthermore, the two sermons of the Friday prayer are not exactly the two rakahs of Salatuz-Zuhr because of the fact that the Prophet would not recite a surah after fatihah in the last two rakah of Salatuz-Zuhr, yet in Friday prayer, the Prophet always recited loudly another surah after fatihah (Abu Majeed 2010). The Hadith, which Umar bin al-Khattab is reported to have said that the other two rakahs of Salatuz-Zuhr were replaced by the Friday Khutbah has been considered weak and unreliable by Nasirudeen al-Bani in his “al-Irwaa hadith no. 605 (AnasHlayat 2010). The above explanation and illustration refute Usmani’s argument that Friday Khutbah stands for two rakahs of Salatuz-Zuhr and that it should be treated like a prayer.

According to Usmani (2000), the practice of translating Friday Khutbah into a local language (which the congregation understands) contradicts the basic purpose of Friday Khutbah. The purpose of Friday Khutbah in Usmani’s view is Dhikr (remembrance or recitation of the names of Allah) and not tadhkir (admonition or education). Some Muslim scholars have also refuted this Usmani’s argument, which to them, defeats the purpose of the Friday Khutbah. On the purpose of the Friday Khutbah, Ali (1986) writes:

“Friday sermon is meant to exhort the people to give them information as to what to do under certain circumstances and what not to do. It is meant, in fact, to know light on all questions of life”.

The purpose of Friday Khutbah is to remind the Muslims or the congregation about their responsibilities and to motivate them to stop evil and promote good in their lives, families and communities. It is also the purpose of the Friday Khutbah to inform the congregation about the conditions of the Ummah and the world.

METHODOLOGY

Research was carried out through content analysis of existing works on the language of Friday sermon. This document analysis is a systematic procedure to evaluate relevant documents which related with the research objectives and research questions (Bowen 2009). It is a social research method and an invaluable part of most scheme of triangulation method purposely to provide a confluence of evidence that breeds credibility (Bowen 2009).

According to O Leary (2014), a researcher can use a huge plethora texts for research though the commonly use is the written documents for content analysis. In this case, the researcher quantifies the use of particular words, phrases and concept. In this study, the document analysis was done using “the Language of Friday Khutbah” written by Usmani (2000). While going through the content of the document, the researcher read thoroughly the book purposely to understand and analysis the views and opinions of Muslim jurists in the Sunni schools of thought on the language of Friday sermon.

RESULT AND DISCUSSION

Contrary to the arguments advanced by Usmani (2000), the result shows that Friday sermon is not analogous or identical with ritual prayer in the sense that the Khateeb (the Imam) can speak of unrelated subjects during the sermon or the sermon can be interrupted for some reasons. For instance, the Prophet once prayed for rain during the Friday sermon after a companion called the Prophet's attention to the fact that there was a drought in the community. In another instance, the Prophet, during his Friday sermon was questioned about faith by a companion. The Prophet (digressed from his sermon) explained to the man what faith was all about and thereafter resumed his sermon (Ali 1986). There are some Prophetic traditions which support the above submission. For instance, Abu Hurairah is quoted by Dabbas and Zaraboso (1985) saying:

“The Prophet was delivering a Khutbah and al-Hassan and al-Hussain came and they were wearing red shirts and they were tripping while walking. The Prophet came down from the pulpit and picked them up and placed them in front of himself and then said: Allah and His Messenger have told the truth: Verily, your wealth and children are a trial. I looked to those two children walking and tripping and I could not be patient, so, I cut off my Khutbah and went to pick them up”.

Ibn Qayyim is quoted by Dabbas and Zaraboso (1985) to have corroborated the above tradition when he states that:

“The Prophet would interrupt his Khutbah due to some reasons or to respond to a question from some of his companions, sometimes, he would descend from the pulpit due to some needs and then return and complete his Khutbah”.

All these actions of the Prophet during the Friday sermon prove that Friday sermon is not identical with Salat (ritual prayer). Moving from one place to another, attending to other issues or distractions, all which are permissible during Friday sermon are not permissible during the Salat (ritual prayer). Similarly, Friday sermon cannot be equated with the Quran and adhan because the Quran is the divine word of Allah, adhan is the Prophetic tradition (sunnah), while Khutbah (sermon) is the words or speech of a person (i.e. Imam or Khateeb). Whether the Khutbah is made in Arabic or in another language has no holy textual value like the Quran, adhan (call to prayer) or Salat (prayer) because the Khutbah is the Khateeb's own invention (Abu Majeed 2010).

While distinguishing salat (ritual prayer) from khutbatul-Jumu'ah (Friday sermon), Afzal (2012) writes inter alia:

Prayer is valid only if facing towards the Qiblah, but Khutbah is just the opposite. Khutbah is valid without ablution, even in the condition of uncleanliness, if inadvertent, and has not to be repeated. A prayer is invalid in both situations, and must be repeated. If Friday prayer becomes invalid, then only the prayer is repeated and not the khutbah.

Meanwhile, majority of the modern jurists are of the view that only the pillars or components of the Khutbah should be rendered in Arabic, while the rest part of the Khutbah can be rendered in any local language. What the four sunni schools of thought consider to be pillars or components of the Friday Khutbah vary. The pillars of the Friday Khutbah, according to Hanafi School of thought, for instance, are the sayings of Alhamdulillah (words of praise), Subhanallah (words of glorification) or Lailaahaila Allah (words of testimony). The Maliki, on the other hand opines that anything, however small it may be is Khutbah in the Arabic language. The Shafi'i School opines that pillars of Friday Khutbah are five, namely praising Allah, prayers upon the Prophet, admonition on piety, praying for the congregation and a recitation of at least a verse of the Quran. These pillars are the obligatory parts of the Friday Khutbah which must be delivered in Arabic even if the audience does not speak Arabic (Abu Majeed 2010). Kilani (2008) states that the Maliki School of thought is of the view that the pillar of Friday Khutbah which must be rendered in Arabic is "some warnings concerning hell-fire or some glad tidings concerning paradise". On the rigid position of the Maliki's school of thought that Friday Khutbah must be rendered in Arabic, Kilani (2008) comments thus:

The Khutbah is not wholly verses of the Quran but Quran messages including hadith of the Prophet meant to admonish Muslims with explanation on current issues and other related matters affecting the Muslims. The purpose of the Khutbah is to benefit those present through exhortation and admonition. How could one give glad tidings of Paradise or warning of Hell in Arabic to people who do not understand Arabic?

On the language of the Friday Khutbah, the Fiqh Council of the Muslim World League, in its fifth resolution of the fifth session, is quoted by Munajjid (2008) as resolved that:

"The fairest opinion is that using Arabic when giving the khutbah on Friday and at Eid in countries where it is not spoken is not a condition of it being valid, but it is better to say the preliminaries of the khutbah and any Quranic verses quoted in Arabic, so as to get non-Arabs used to hearing Arabic and the Quran, which will make it easier to learn it and read the Quran in the language in which it was revealed. Then the khateeb can follow that with exhortation in their language which they understand”.

In the contemporary Muslim world, Friday Khutbah is officially delivered in native languages in countries like Indonesia, Malaysia, Iran, Turkey, North America, Arab countries, South Africa and African countries including Nigeria. While making reference to the delivery of Friday Khutbah in the Arab world, Hussain (2012) observes thus:

“In all Arab countries, Friday Khutbah is delivered in local dialect known as “Amiyya”- this is a colloquial Arabic that is considerably different from “Fusha” the classical Quranic and Prophetic Arabic. Anyone who has travelled in the Arab world cannot fail to notice this. During my two years of study at al-Azhar, I used to pray the Friday prayer in various masjids and it was rarity to find a khateeb who would deliver the khutbah in “Fusha”- it was mostly in “Amiyya”. If the sahabah (companions) were to present (in those mosques), they would not understand a word”.

From the above quotation, it is understandable that colloquial Arabic is the local dialect of Arabic language which is quite different from the classical Arabic language spoken and understood by the Prophet and his companions. This implies that Friday Khutbah is not being delivered (in some Arab countries) in classical Arabic, which the Maliki and other sunni Imams considered to be the language of the Friday Khutbah. In his own contribution to the debate on the language of Khutbatul-Jumu'ah, Afzal (2012) submits that Friday Khutbah (sermon) may be delivered in any of the following ways:

1. Both parts of the Khutbah may be delivered only in Arabic.
2. The first part of the Khutbah may be delivered partly in Arabic and partly in another language but the second Khutbah may be delivered only in Arabic.
3. Both the first and second Khutbah may be delivered partly in Arabic and partly in other language.
4. Both the Khutbah may be delivered in another language after the essential Tashhahud (words of testimony) in Arabic.
5. Both parts of the Khutbah may be delivered in other language with no Arabic.

The above enumerated submissions on the language of the Friday Khutbah can further be analyzed. In a purely Arabic speaking community, Friday sermon is to be rendered in Arabic language, while in a non-Arabic speaking environment but whose members understand Arabic to some extent, Friday can be delivered in both Arabic and the language of the community. In a Muslim country/community where Arabic is not spoken and understood, Imam is expected to deliver some important components of sermon in Arabic (provided he knows it) and explain the contents of the sermon in the language understood by the congregation. However, if Imam can only read Arabic Quran but cannot speak or understand Arabic as well as his congregation especially in a rural area, Friday sermon can be delivered in the local language understood by the people. We need to understand the fact that it is Allah that creates and understands all languages and tribes of the world (al-Rum 30: 22, al-Hujurat 49: 13). Therefore, any language spoken to deliver Friday sermon is understood by Allah whom the worship (Friday prayer) is directed to.

CONCLUSION

Going by the arguments and counter arguments of the medieval and contemporary Muslim scholars on the preferred language of delivery of Friday sermon, my submission, therefore, is that Friday sermon can be delivered or rendered in Arabic language if the Imam and the congregation (of the Friday prayer) understand Arabic properly. Friday sermon can also be delivered in Arabic language, and then, translated into local language (of the audience) if the audience does not understand Arabic. Furthermore, if the Imam or Khateeb and the congregation do not understand Arabic, the main pillars or components (earlier identified) can be rendered in Arabic while the admonition aspect is rendered in the local language of the audience so that the impact of the Friday sermon can be felt by the congregation in particular and the Muslims in general. By so doing, the Khateeb or Imam will have complied with Allah's injunction in Suratul Ibrahim 14: 4 and, at the same time, complied with the Prophetic practice (sunnah) of delivering Khutbah in fusha or classical Arabic and not Amiyyah Arabic or colloquial Arabic.

Considering the fact that Arabic is the language that facilitates proper understanding of Islam as a religion and a way of life, it is imperative for Friday Imam and Muslims in general to strive to learn and understand Arabic language. The Muslims, belonging to different schools of thought and views on the language of the Friday sermon, ought to appreciate and respect the views and opinions of the medieval jurists of the four Sunni schools of thought and other scholars, who gave their fataawa (rulings) based on their understanding of the Quran, hadith/sunnah and their immediate environments.

REFERENCES

- Abdul Wali, D.S. 2010. Al-Khutab al-Minbariyya fi Mantiqat Ikoroduwal-Imam Nasirud-Deen 'Alim: Dirasat Namudhjiyah. Unpublished long essay, Department of Foreign Languages, Lagos State University, Ojo.
- Abu Majeed 2010. Language of the Friday Sermon. www.suhaiwebb.com/2011 [24 August 2015].

- Afzal, O. 2012. The Language of Khutbat al-Jumu'ah. www.irfi.org.com [17 April 2014].
- Ali, M.M. 1986. Religion of Islam. New Delhi: Taj Company.
- Bowen, G.A. 2009. Document Analysis as a Qualitative Research Method. Qualitative Research Journal 9(2): 27-40. doi:10.3316/QRj0902027.
- Dabbas, S. M. & Zaraboso, M.J. 1985. Sayyid al-Sabiq, Fiqh Sunnah. Indiana: American Trust Publications.
- Fawzani, S. 2009. A Summary of Islamic Jurisprudence. Vol.1. Riyadh: Al-Maiman Publishing House.
- Hussain M. 2012. Language of the Friday Prayer. www.musharrafhussain.com/language-of-the-friday-prayer [12 October 2015].
- Ismail M.B. 1997. Al-Fiqh al-Wadhimin al-Kitabwa Sunna ala madhab al-Arba'. Vol.1. Cairo: Daarulminar.
- Khan, M.Z. 1985. Gardens of the Righteous, Riyadh as-Salihin of Imam Nawawi, English-Arabic Vol.1 & 2. Lagos: Al-Waseelat Publishers.
- Kilani, A.O. 2008. Minaret in the Delta (Islam in Port Harcourt and its Environs (1896-2007)). Mushin. Lagos: Printer Global Dakwah Communication.
- Metacalfe J.E. & Astle C. n.d. Correct English. England: Clarion MCMXCV.
- Munajjid, M. S. 2008. Friday Khutbah in Languages Other than Arabic. www.islamqa.info/en/112041 [24 July 2014].
- Nyazee, A.K. 2006. The Distinguished Jurist's Primer (Bidayat- al-Mujtahid Ibn Rushd). Vol.1. United Kingdom: Garnet Publishing.
- O Leary, Z. 2014. The Essential Guide to Doing Your Research Project. 2nd Ed. Thousand Oaks CA: Sage Publication.
- Taha, A. 2006. Al-Jawahirul-Minbariyyah fi Khutabi li Jami' wal-manasabatiddijniyya. Vol. 1&2. Cairo: Darul-Bayyan al-Arabiyy Publication.
- Usmani, M.T. 2000. The Language of the Friday Khutbah. Karachi, Pakistan: Idaratul Ma'arif.
- Yusuf Ali, A. 2007. The Holy Quran: Text and Translation. Petaling Jaya: Islamic Trust Book.

